TMA President Steve Butkovich presented the much respected and esteemed volunteer with the award, TMA’s highest honor, at the 2024 TMA Annual Meeting on Oct. 9th in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands.

“I was humbled when presented with this great award. I was also honored to be standing among some of the greatest contributors in our industry, many of which are my own mentors and those I have looked to for guidance and support throughout my career,” stated Kylau. “They have taught me the meaning of getting involved and giving back to the industry that I so enjoy being a part of! TMA and its members truly are one big family working together for the betterment of our industry.”

The Stanley C. Lott Memorial Award, established in 1991 to honor its namesake, a dedicated leader and past president, recognizes exceptional long-term TMA leadership and support. “Sascha’s been a passionate, engaged, and energized contributor to TMA for many years,” observed TMA President Butkovich. “In that time, he has consistently dedicated his time, knowledge, and talents to the advancement of his professional peers and industry, asking nothing in return. I was deeply honored to present this award to him.”
